Biographical/Historical Note

William R. Shelton (1805–1860), builder and resident of the Shelton House located at 40 Pleasant St. in Windsor, owned a hat-making company in the 1830s until the 1850s. Working with his business partner Walter Pease, Pease & Shelton—later, known just as the William Shelton Company—he made hats from otter, beaver, and nutria (a South American animal similar to beaver) for dealers in New England, New York, and Philadelphia. William Shelton married Frances Buckland (1810–1855) and had nine children, seven of whom lived to adulthood.

A large portion of this collection deals with their third living son, Henry Clay Shelton (1838–1909). Their eldest son, William C. Shelton (1829–) enlisted on December 17, 1851 at the age of 23 in the U.S. Army, and was discharged for ‘ordinary disability’ five years later at Fort Ridgely in Minnesota. Their daughter Lucy A. Shelton (1836–1892) married Samuel C. Loomis, a local blacksmith, in the late 1850s. After the death of his wife, William R. Shelton lived with the Loomis family until his death in 1860. The Loomises also boarded Shelton’s second son George (1830–1890), who worked as a farmer and fisherman. Much business correspondence links the Shelton and Loomis families. The letters of Jeannette Shelton, daughter of Lucy and Samuel Loomis, to her husband Lodewick Hudson, can also be found in this collection. They married in 1884 and had three children. Their eldest son, Ralph Hudson (1887–1967) worked as the Director of the School of Religious Work at Yale University before he was drafted in 1917, spending part of WWI in France. He married Dorothea D. Curtis in 1920, and resided in Iowa, Pennsylvania, and Florida before his death in 1967. See the brief biographical outline below for more details.

Henry C. Shelton lived in New Haven, Connecticut for the majority of his life. In 1860, Henry Clay Shelton became the guardian of his younger sister Flora I. Shelton until she reached adulthood in 1869. He was enlisted into Company A of the 27th Infantry Regiment of the GAR on October 3, 1862, and mustered out on July 27, 1863. He achieved the rank of Sergeant. As a civilian, Henry C. Shelton ran and invested in several businesses, although his profession on the federal census is consistently listed as "accountant." It is unclear when the Henry C. Shelton and Co., run with partners

Henry J. Turner, Charles T. Ward, and Aaron E. Platt, was created, but record of the company spans several decades. According to Greenough, Jones & Co.'s New Haven (Conn.) Directory of 1874-1875, the company sold a variety of items, including "cigars, tobacco, and Yankee notions." In the 1880s, Shelton took part in the failed business venture to begin the National Manufacturing Company in New Haven, which aimed to manufacture, buy, and sell machinery and machinists' and mechanics' tools. He purchased 20 shares or 21% of the company in 1881, increased to 70 shares or 23% as the company grew in August of 1884. In 1885, however, the National Manufacturing Company was declared insolvent, and all property was transferred to a Robert A. Brown. In 1886, Henry Clay Shelton applied for a patent for an improvement on a 'Clothes-Drier' machine, which he was granted by the United States Patent and Trademark Office on February 1, 1887. A description of his invention can be found in the Official Gazette of the USPTO, Vol. 38, page 500. In 1891, he went into business with his nephew Lodewick Hudson and a J. M. Fairfield, and managed Hudson & Company, which manufactured and sold Shellac Varnish in Windsor, Connecticut. In 1907, Henry Clay Shelton served as executor of the estate of Francis E. Spencer, relation unknown. Henry died in New Haven on October 25, 1909.
