THE DREAMER

The dreamer dreamed and the busy world
Passed by with a mocking smile,
As it went in search of the world's rewards,
But the dreamer dreamed the while.

He saw the world as the world should be,
When longer years had run;
And the world but paused in the work to see—
Pray what has the dreamer done?

Yet ever the dreamer dreamed his dream,
Until, in some wondrous way—
As the water springing in deeps of earth,
Finds passage to upper day—

The dreamer's dream found the man of power—
'Tis strange how men's lives are knit—
Who knew not the dreamer, but took his dream
And transformed the world with it.

The world bows down to the man of power—
Forgotten, the dreamer dies,
Yet the dream he dreamed is the secret force
That has forged man's destinies.
—Credit Lost.

The Public Service Committee of the Business Men's Association, J. B. Stewart, Chairman, held a public hearing for complaints against the trolley service, in the Windsor Town Hall on January 10. The Committee is reviewing the complaints made at that time and asks that any one having further complaints, make them as definite as possible and mail them addressed to the Committee, P. O. Box 357, Windsor.

PEN AND CAMERA PORTRAITS OF WELL KNOWN MEN.

JAMES F. NORRIS

Tobacco Grower, President Hayden Station Social Club

He has strong opinions on many subjects but is reticent in expressing them unless the occasion calls for a statement or his opinion is asked. In either circumstance he gives his opinion briefly and exactly, without frills or apologies.

From the day of his birth in the "Picket House" in Hayden Station to the day these lines are written, his many friends have failed to find one attribute more characteristic of James Norris than his reliability. In his dealings with men no bond could be better than his word. During his long association with Fred H. Thrall in the growing of tobacco he has never failed to receive loyal, effective co-operation and service from the men who work with or under him. He has an unusual reputation for mechanical ingenuity, it having been said that he could "fix anything." As a grower and handler of tobacco he has no superior—and that is a record of meaning in Windsor.

ANOTHER BIG PUBLIC MEETING OF THE WINDSOR BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION

WINDSOR TOWN HALL
TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 6th.
ON THE SCHOOL QUESTION IN WINDSOR.
EVERYBODY WELCOME, MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

SPECIAL SPEAKER:

MR. W. C. HOLDEN

HEAD OF

OF THE HARTFORD PUBLIC HIGH SCHOOL.

This meeting has been arranged with the cooperation of the Town School Committee of Windsor and Superintendent Howard. It seems that there are greater needs for improvement in Windsor Schools and the School Committee will take this public opportunity to tell what they are.

The January meeting, at which the American Voting Machine Company representatives gave a demonstration and explanation of their improved machine was largely attended and it is hoped that an even larger number will attend the coming meeting.

As we go to press we are informed that the Trustees of the Loomis Institute will hold their annual meeting on Thursday January 18th and that Rev. Dr. F. W. Harriman of Windsor will be elected a member of the Board to fill the vacancy left by the death of John McLaren of Chicago, a friend of Colonel John Mason Loomis. James Lee Loomis of East Granby will also be elected to the Board. With the election of Dr. Harriman, this town will have two representatives on the Board, the other being Miss Jennie Loomis.

TOWN NEWS AND GOSSIP.

Dr. Peter MacQueen, F. R. G. S., a brilliant lecturer, war-correspondent and writer, recently gave an address of singular vividness and comprehensiveness on "The Great European War," at the Loomis Institute. This lecture like the others in the splendid series of lectures by prominent speakers held at the Loomis Institute this winter was opened to the townspeople through the courtesy of Head Master Batchelder. Dr. MacQueen displayed over two hundred pictures taken by him on battlefields and in ruined towns and villages in France, Belgium and Germany.

Thomas Driscoll and his daughter, Lucille, Miss Lucy Drien and Miss Mary Alford, of Poquonock are in Florida for the winter.

Miss Maria Phelps of Poquonock is on a several weeks trip to the Pacific coast.

Charles T. Welch, former postmaster in Windsor, has been elected as messenger for the House of Representatives in Hartford.

Miss Jane Blood of Cambridge, Mass., a member of the faculty at Loomis Institute, recently entertained as guests at her home, the Misses Annette Pomeroy, May Tolles and Elizabeth Eddy, who are students in her class at the Institute.

Harry W. Mack has secured a five-year privilege of cutting the ice on Hatheway Pond in Poquonock. A large ice-house will be built there from which ice will be distributed in Poquonock and Rainbow next season.

The Delta Alpha Club gave a performance of "The Mischief Makers" at the Windsor Town Hall on January 18. A large audience was present and the play was as heartily enjoyed as when it was presented last season. The profits will go into the fund for a public Play Ground established by this girls' society last year. The play was produced under the direction of Mrs. Grace Olmstead Scouten.

The Wilson Fire District has paid about $1,200 interest on money borrowed for constructing the sewer in that place. The unanticipated causes for delay in completing the work has therefore been irksome and expensive to the residents of the District, as well as to Contractor Lambo. The contractor has already been paid $16,254.70.

Rev. Roscoe Nelson was presented with a purse of $150 at the annual meeting of the First Congregational Church, Jan. 17.

The Christmas Tree entertainment for employees and families of the neighborhood, given at the office of the Wilson Brick Company, was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Presents were contributed by many friends and the occasion was one long to be remembered by those who participated.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

At the special town meeting on December 29 the Selectmen were unanimously authorized to petition the General Assembly for special acts which will enable Windsor to have a Town Plan Commission, composed of the Three Selectmen and three others to be elected at a Town meeting. This Commission which will serve without pay, if created, will have power to decide street and veranda lines in Windsor, outside the Windsor Fire District. The bill presented was drawn up by Attorney Royal W. Thompson, a member of the special committee appointed by the Windsor Business Men's Association for that purpose.

The selectmen were empowered to borrow $29,000, under the third item in the call of the meeting.

The matter of the petition of the New Haven railroad to the Public Utilities Commission was vigorously discussed. It was finally voted as the sense of the meeting that Union Street be not closed as a highway, but the Selectmen were given full power and authority in the matter.

The matter of the purchase of voting machines was tabled, as a demonstration of the machines was to be given at a public meeting of the Business Mens' Association on January 5th.

Just before the holidays a teacher of one of the primary classes in a Windsor school, gave the children a little talk about Christmas. As a preamble she asked if any of the children could tell what "Merry Christmas" meant. After a few moment's wait, Marion, the little daughter of Carlan H. and Mrs. Goslee volunteered the explanation that "Merry Christmas" was the wife of Santa Claus! So now we know.

The men of the Hayden Station Social Club will serve the next supper on the evening of Thursday, February 1.

The December number of The League News edited by Walter A. Cook of Windsor, County Agent of the Hartford County League carries the County Agent's interesting annual report, which is devoted to the subjects of live stock improvement, crop improvement, farm management, co-operative associations, etc. Farmers are advised, if they have not already ordered their Spring supply of fertilizers, to give the matter early consideration.

Fred H. Young of Wilson is at Swansborough, N. C., on a combined business and hunting trip.

The officers and directors of the Windsor Trust and Safe Deposit Company will hold their annual reception at the bank on the afternoon and evening of Friday, February 16.

The new Orpah Lodge of Rebekahs was formally instituted with 80 members on December 29th, the officers of the Lodge being duly installed by Grand Master F. Henry Monroe of New Haven. The officers of the new lodge are: Noble grand, Mrs. F. H. Phelps; vice-grand, Mrs. Volney M. Burdick; recording secretary, Mrs. Carlan H. Goslee; financial secretary, Mrs. Mary Reilly; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Norrie; warden, Mrs. Katherine Drake; conductor, Mrs. Emily Gregg; right supporter, Mrs. Lida Matthews; left supporter, Mrs. Grace Jones; chaplain, Mrs. Joseph Olroyd; right supporter, vice-grand, Mrs. Ida Cox; left supporter, vice-grand, Mrs. Lois Potter; inside guard, Mrs. John W. LeGeyt; outside guard, Oliver J. Reilly.

The local chapter of the D. A. R. is to present the operetta, "Cinderella in Flower Land" shortly after Easter, which comes this year on April 8.

E. D. Hammond of Hartford is driving an artesian well at the home of Lewis Allen in Hayden's.

The Town Crier believes in heredity and an incident at the end of the evening of the Leap Year Dance convinced him that an ancestor of his was the original little Sunday-School-Book boy who always got his comeuppance if his foot strayed an inch from the path of virtue.

He was given a box of lemonade glasses to carry to his home. Raising the cover of the box he noted that the glasses were not very closely packed and the same glance wandering around observed a goodly number of little fancy cakes left over. Now, like Nature, he abhors waste and a vacuum, so he tucked a few cakes in the chinks between the glasses and he didn't bother to tie the cover on the box. On the way out of the hall a good neighbor asked him to ride home and as he stepped off the walk on the way to the auto an avenging bit of ice caused his unexpected and forceful downfall.

Glasses and small cakes danced into view to the music of the unfeeling laughter of his friends.

Well, the cakes were lost but it might have been worse.—He broke no bones and only five glasses.

At the meeting of the Emergency Aid association, held January 9 in the town hall, officers were re-elected as follows: Dr. A. H. Campbell, president; Miss Agnes McCormick, vice-president; Ruel Tuttle, treasurer; the Rev. Roscoe Nelson, secretary. New directors elected to succeed the six retiring at this time were: Mrs. C. H. Schneider, Miss Josephine Griswold, Hestus W. Alford, Miss Annie E. Holcomb, Mrs. N. W. Hayden, the Rev. W. B. Cornish. George W. Mastaglio was elected auditor.

THE FARM LOAN BANK— AND HARTFORD

Following the announcement that Springfield had come off victorious in the fight for the Federal Farm Loan Bank we read with real regret an editorial statement in the one Hartford newspaper where we should least have thought to find it, that:

"We decline to congratulate either Springfield or the government on the selection. We still adhere to the belief that Springfield did not have anything to offer . . . that Hartford could not also offer and Hartford many things to offer that Springfield could not and never can offer. We also incline to the belief that it has been a battle with the decision made before the contest started. . . . Every opportunity for making loans that will be open to the bank located in Springfield would have been open to the bank located in Hartford. . . . Secretary McAdoo and other members of the Farm Bank board have repeatedly told Hartford that the decision as to the location had not been made. That it would be made on the merits of the case. Yet Springfield has boasted for two weeks past that it would have the bank. . . . If the decision was not made on December 26, as officials at Washington asserted to representatives of the Hartford Chamber of Commerce, how came it that Springfield was so cock-sure, and, as events proved, had reason to be cock-sure. Is it possible Springfield had better sources of information than the members of the Farm Loan board, or were the cards gummed from the start?"

The answer is that the cards were "gummed" from the start! The gumming commenced in 1636 when William Pynchon decided the geographical location of the future city of Springfield. The gumming continued with the development of New England and the distribution of its farming population. The gumming becomes more obvious in the special encouragement given farmers and farming by the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture and in such enterprises as that of Brockton's largest bank in establishing a Farm Loan Department, headed by an expert who not only arranged financial assistance for worthy farmers, but actually went into the market and purchased blooded stock for them. This bank also loaned money to boys and girls, on their personal notes, for the buying and raising of hogs.

IN A PERIOD OF ABOUT TWO YEARS OVER ONE MILLION DOLLARS HAS BEEN LOANED TO FARMERS THROUGH THIS BANK AND NOT ONE CENT OF IT HAS EVER BEEN LOST!

The Commercial Trust Company of Springfield has opened—or is about to open—a similar Department, and in the face of the coming of the Farm Loan Bank.

The Hampden County Improvement League is famous throughout New England for what it has done for rural communities.

More gumming was evident in the action of Herbert Myrick of Springfield in causing the introduction of the Farm Loan Bank bill in Congress. President Wilson showed recognition of that gumming when he presented to Mr. Myrick the pen with which he made the bill a law.

Now Hartford is the dandiest little winner in the whole wide world and it could hardly be expected that spontaneous congratulations would be extended either to Springfield or the government, but what could Hartford offer to offset all this "gumming," or in other words, what could Hartford—or Connecticut—show as a balance to what Springfield—and Massachusetts—had done and promised to do.

Granted, that: "Hartford offers an opportunity for absorption and assimilation of the assets of the Farm Loan Bank that Springfield cannot possibly offer."

Hartford cannot offer, nevertheless, so central a location, considering New England's farming population.

Granted, that Hartford's great insurance institutions have millions of dollars invested in farm loans.

But these loans are almost wholly in the West. Do you suppose Secretary McAdoo overlooked that?

We gladly make some exceptions when we say that Hartford banks have not generally been accommodating in their dealings with country people seeking loans—at least many of these people so assert. At one time they were referred to the State School Fund and then—this fund became largely invested in the West, to be recalled and restricted to Connecticut uses, only through the strenuous efforts of Representative House of Windsor in the 1915 General Assembly.

Hartford had—and has—"every opportunity for making loans that will be open to Springfield," but Hartford has not regarded its opportunities to loan money to farmers, as opportunities.

Even the capably managed Hartford County League has failed to receive the support it has hoped for—and deserves.

In view of all these facts can Secretary McAdoo and his associates be decently called unfair—and more? If they had prejudices is their good faith to be questioned merely—because they gave other cities than Springfield a chance to present their claims before making a definite and irrevocable decision?—Practically all the other New England cities waived their own claims and endorsed Springfield.

As for Springfield's "cock-sureness" over the matter we feel compelled to report that despite an avowed desire by all parties concerned, that this Bank matter should be kept out of politics, there was a marvellous "cock-sureness" expressed more than once in Hartford by the statement that the Bank was a "cinch" for that city because Hartford went Democratic at the last election, while Springfield went Republican.

Hartford is unfortunate at times in evidencing through its apparent representatives a certain smug self-satisfaction and a lack of interest in and consideration for its suburban neighbors which is sometimes galling and never agreeable to a portion of the population which so largely contributes to its prosperity.

Still, what benefits Hartford, usually—but not always—benefits its suburbs, and vice versa, and we can therefore sympathize with Hartford in her recent loss most sincerely. At the same time, because we like to be as sportsmanlike when we lose as when we win, we can congratulate Springfield most cordially—and we do—and the government as well.

If the post-offices in Windsor, Poquonock and Wilson's are closed for any reason and you wish to mail a package, a newspaper, or even a good sized envelope, you can't do it. If you live in the center and Mr. Barnes' "Store of Cheerful Service" is open you can go in there with your mail and ask them to mail it when next the post-office opens. In the other places there is, doubtless, some cheerful server who will perform a like neighborly favor for you. The only other way to start your mail on its way is to wait until the post-office opens—or take it to Hartford. Will not a kind-hearted government inspector recommend adequate outside mail receptacles for our post-offices?

The Chautauqua Association of Swarthmore College of Swarthmore, Pa., recently sent its representative, Mrs. Bertha E. Merrill to Windsor to obtain signatures to a plan to hold Chautauqua meetings in Windsor during the coming summer. As we go to press we are informed that Mrs. Merrill has secured the necessary number of signatures.

It is unfortunate that with all the improvements in and near the Windsor depot, made by the New Haven railroad, passengers alighting from north-bound trains are constantly in danger of painful if not serious injury on account of the height of the lowest steps from the ground. Many persons have fallen here and it is very desirable that some plan be worked out by which such accidents may be prevented.

Perhaps the railroad may be induced to plank this section of the railroad tracks, in connection with the other improvements they are making, and plan to make, in the vicinity.

Congregational Church Junior Endeavorers Give The Town Farm Inmates A Merry Christmas Surprise.

The suggestion made in last month's Windsor Town Crier that some organization of young people of Windsor visit the Town Farm at Christmas time was splendidly acted upon by the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Windsor Congregational church. The young people visited the Farm, Sunday afternoon, December 24th, and sang to the inmates and also presented each one with a box of candy and an orange.

The inmates were delighted over this generous manifestation of the Christmas spirit by these young people and they are talking about it yet. Most of them have had revived in them that youthful spirit which makes them look forward even now to "next Christmas."

The demonstration of the American Voting Machine by Messrs. Stickney and Keene of the company manufacturing them, aroused much interest at the January meeting of the Business Men's Association. The Company plans to leave a machine in the Town Hall for several days during the coming spring, so that Windsor people generally will have an opportunity to investigate them before the March Town meeting, where the question of purchasing or hiring such machines may be considered.

We learn that the private school styled the Merchants & Bankers' Business School, located on Pratt Street, Hartford, admits new pupils at this time of the year and as late as the middle of February. The school takes the new pupils through courses in stenography, secretaryship and bookkeeping by the Individual Advancement Method, each pupil advancing or falling back according to his efforts. This method of advancing if one hustles or of failing if one shirks is a lesson for any of us. Then again a school is better able by this plan, to mark the bees from the drones, and make its recommendation to business men accordingly. This School is successful as a Service school—training the student for the business man.

POEMS WORTH READING

O, Captain! My Captain! By Walt Whitman

(Walt Whitman, known as the "Good Grey Poet" was born in 1819 on Long Island, N. Y. He spent many years in tramping tours about the country and in newspaper work. His book of poems, "Leaves of Grass" brought him fame, praise and abuse, many critics calling the book immoral. It is easy to understand such assertions because the verses were all absolutely unconventional and direct in subject and expression. Whitman's splendid personal heroism in Civil War days, his self-sacrifices and his gentleness of character, make it impossible, however, to believe that he could ever have written a line not inspired by the purest of purposes. The poem which follows was written after the assassination of President Lincoln, whom Whitman loved.)

Oh, Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is done,
The ship has weather'd every rack,
The prize we sought is won,
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring.

But, O, heart! heart! heart!
O, the bleeding drops of red,
Where on the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead.

Oh, Captain! my Captain! rise up and hear the bells;
Rise up—for you the flag is flung—
for you the bugle trills,
For you bouquets and ribbon'd wreaths —for you the shores a-crowding,
For you they call, the swaying mass,
their eager faces turning;

Here, Captain! dear Father!
This arm beneath your head!
It is some dream that on the deck,
You've fallen cold and dead.

My Captain does not answer, his lips are pale and still,
My father does not feel my arm, he has no pulse nor will,
His ship is anchor'd safe and sound,
its voyage closed and done,
From fearful trip the victor ship comes in with object won;

Exult, O shores, and ring, O bells!
But I with mournful tread,
Walk the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead.

BEWARE OF THE BITE OF A WILD HEIFER !!

The way the country correspondent "puts things over" on his city cousin, whose gullibility in regard to rural life is as keenly appreciated outside of the cities as is the popular "rube" joke in the cities, is illustrated by the following "Special to a Hartford paper," dated from Hazardville, on Jan. 6:

An exciting hunt was taken part in by ten men from East Longmeadow, near the North Family's Shakers plantation, Thursday. About November 1, six Holstein heifers belonging to Henry S. Ashley of East Longmeadow escaped from the pasture near the Shaker's place and have been running at large ever since.

Thursday, Mr. Ashley got together the men and accompanied by John Braun and his two bull dogs started out to capture the animals. They were soon sighted by the party and the dogs set at work to round them up, but they succeeded in capturing only three of them. . . . All the animals were as wild and fleet as deer. . . . While Mr. Ashley was fastening the runway behind the wagon in which the captured yearlings were tied one of them turned and bit him severely on the left ankle, making a very painful wound.

This story reads plausibly enough up to the last sentence but most city readers would bite at and swallow that, along with the rest. Here in the country, armed with a knowledge of the fact that a heifer has no upper front teeth and that no one around here has ever heard of any one receiving a bite, painful or otherwise, from a horned animal, we feel compelled to believe that Mr. Ashley's bite must have been inflicted by one of Mr. Braun's bull-dogs.

POQUONOCK CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BAZAAR.

The Rainbow Firefly informs us with incredible modesty that language fails her in attempting to describe all of the attractions of the bazaar, planned by the Congregational Church of Poquonock, and which is to continue for the afternoons and evenings of January 30 and 31, and February 1, in the Poquonock Town Hall.

A world (?) renowned Poquonock chicken pie supper with Windsor squash pie will be served the first night, followed by an equally good, but different, supper the second night, in the lower hall.

Above stairs will be found attractive booths presided over by charming matrons, lovely girls, and just mere men. Aprons, fancy work, useful articles, flowers, confections, college ices and everything needful for one's happiness and well-being can be secured. Fish may be caught and sports enjoyed along the "Great White Way."

There will be a special entertainment each evening. On the third evening, February 1, a three act drama called, "Deacon Dubbs" will be presented. The cast follows: Deacon Dubbs, Charles Huntington; Amos Coleman, Dexter Phelon; Raydon Crawley, Wallace H. March; Major McNutt, Ervine Parker; Deuteronomy Jones, Donovan Wolff; Rose Raleigh, Mrs. F. M. Case; Miss Philipena Popover, Mrs. J. R. Rogers; Emily Dale, Annie Callender; Trixie Coleman, Anna Scheele; Yennie Yensen, Leona Neal.

The last word in an up-to-date cookbook is being compiled by Mrs. Carr and will be on sale.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING ABOUT WINDSOR.

The Story of the Hayden Station Social Club

by

HATTIE F. GRANGER

"The annual turkey supper given by the Hayden Station Social Club will be served by the men of the society on Thursday evening -----." Each year as the above notice appears in the papers and our friends come from far and near to enjoy the finely cooked turkey supper with all its 'fixins', served only as the men of the Hayden Station Social Club can serve, do our thoughts go backward and we think of the struggle the few charter members had to earn the little hall building and its furnishings. Let me tell the story as it has been told to me.

"Mrs. Henry Osborne suggested to the older ladies of the neighborhood that they meet with their sewing for a social afternoon. She decided upon the date and sent her little daughter, Louise, around to ask the ladies to meet at what was then the Congregational Chapel and each one was requested to bring a box lunch. Of course all accepted and it was such a pleasant afternoon, although they didn't even have a cup of tea with their lunch, that another meeting was arranged and held in due time. After three meetings the younger ladies suggested that they would like to meet with the others. This plan was carried out with mutual satisfaction. Soon after, at a meeting where the ladies found much food was left after they had had their supper, it was proposed that the men of the families be asked to stop on their way home from their various occupations and have supper. This supper proved so satisfying to the gentlemen that they became greatly interested and expressed a hope that the pleasant occasion might be soon repeated."

It was on October 26, 1887, that the first meeting was held in the Chapel, which stands nearly opposite the residence of Mrs. Lucretia Hayden Harvey, and the Club was organized with 28 charter members.

At the next meeting, held November 4, the first officers of the Club were elected. They were: President, Mrs. Emma (W. A.) Easton; Vice-President, Miss Mary I. Bissell, (Mrs. J. B. Spencer,); Secretary, Miss Annie L. Rhaum, (Mrs. J. A. Oldroyd,); Treasurer, Miss Louise Osborne; Executive Committee, Miss Cora Thrall, (Mrs. Arthur Cowan), Theodore V. Clapp, Miss Josie Rhaum.

For a time the governing rules of the little Club consisted of a set of five by-laws. The meetings were held every two weeks, with a supper for which each one paid five cents! This was followed by literary exercises. Other residents soon joined the Club and a fund began to accumulate in the treasury. It was on March 28, 1888, that the first deposit was made in the Pratt Street Savings Bank in Hartford. It amounted to one hundred and sixty dollars. At each meeting members carried dishes to the Chapel to serve the supper with. The work occasioned by these affairs was accomplished under great difficulties. As there was no table for a time, the ladies washed dishes with the dish-pan placed on a chair and any suspicious dark spot brought forth the remark, "That's where the dish-pan sat." One member tells of an ice cream sale and says, "We had to make the cream at home—there were no telephones by which to order it, sent express, all cut, ready to serve, as now."

Extraordinary efforts were always made by the ladies to keep the little Chapel neat beyond criticism. It was thoroughly cleaned after each supper and entertainment. Many of the ladies vividly recall the strenuous "mopping bees" held there.

Mrs. Emma (W. A.) Easton,
First President of the Club

Some of the elderly ladies felt, nevertheless, that the holding of social affairs in the Chapel was not just in keeping with the purposes to which the building had been dedicated, and so, on July 2, 1889, a special meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Osborne to consider the question of holding meetings in the Chapel another year. The subject of building a club house was also discussed.

The result of the meeting was an offer by Mr. and Mrs. Osborne to donate to the society, land for a new building. The committee considered that if it should ever become necessary to enlarge the hall more land would be required. Mr. and Mrs. Osborne thereupon offered for the nominal price of twelve dollars another lot equal in size and adjoining the one donated. The offer was accepted and the deed was given and is kept in the Windsor Town Hall, in accordance with the request of Mr. and Mrs. Osborne. The land was deeded to the Hayden Station Social Club, Inc., and on April 22, 1891, the constitution and new or revised by-laws were accepted and the club named Hayden Station Social Club. On September 26, 1891, articles of Association were filed.

At this time there were between eight hundred and nine hundred dollars in the treasury and it was necessary to borrow about two hundred more, and the work on the new building was started.

The first supper in the new hall was held October 2, 1891, with exercises appropriate for the dedication. Then began a series of entertainments to earn the money for cancelling the indebtedness. Card parties, apron sales and quilting parties, a notable Colonial party on February 22, 1892, strawberry festivals, an annual harvest supper and a Christmas tree party as the year's closing entertainment. October 6, 1892, a fair was held and one hundred dollars paid on the loan. At that fair the old Windsor Band, whose membership list included the names of D. W. Mack, Leader; W. H. Bower, Secretary; Wm. H. Filley, Treasurer; A. E. Phelps, Drum Major; and H. E. Phelps, E. L. Smith, E. L. Cobb, T. S. Loomis E. A. Welch, Martin Palmer, H. H. Ellsworth, F. W. Mack, C. E. Elliott, R. H. Phelps, Wm. Marks, Frederick Marks, Dwight Phelps, Walter Smith, C. T. Welch, Wm. Hayes, E. J. Phelps, E. J. Brown, E. B. Green, Roswell Clapp, J. E. Ransom, John Flint, Louis F. Clapp and Arthur C. Roberts, and whose treasury was as empty at this time as was that of the H. S. Social Club, furnished the music and received for their services a bountiful supper. This band was organized in 1870 and disbanded in 1895.

At this time the hall had not been finished inside and while the ladies were there winding evergreens and in other ways getting ready for the fair, it rained and for some reason the roof leaked, giving more than one reason for unpleasant remembrances of the evening. At once the building was sheathed on the inside and was all in fine shape on the date of the fair.

Several donations of necessary furnishings were made by members, about this time, and also loans of money as needed. These loans were later repaid in full as the Treasurer had funds. The great event of 1893 was the paying of the mortgage and the feeling of independence and pride which accompanied that action was truly American.

October 26, 1899, it was voted to name the hall, "The Hillside Casino."

The average membership of the Club for several years has been thirty. We who are working today feel grateful to those who have passed to the Great Beyond for all their help and guidance in the early existence of this social enterprise.

In looking over the records the writer has wondered what became of the little paper called the "Local Enterprise." The editor is still living and she, perhaps, knows.

The little workings of the Club at this time are very familiar to many. The modern kitchen, electric lights, cupboards filled with new dishes, silver and linen ample for all requirements, and a very nice new piano, all have been acquired by hard work, but the social gatherings we have are so pleasant that the members never weary in well doing. A supper is served every three weeks and they are greatly enjoyed and well patronized by all.

It has ever been the spirit of the Club to extend cordial greetings to the stranger and guest who attend the social gatherings.

The present officers of the Club are: James F. Norris, President; Charles O. Clark, Vice-President; Joseph B. Spencer, Treasurer; Mrs. A. J. Granger, Secretary. The Board of Trustees is composed of: F. A. West, Chairman, and Mrs. Henry L. Cutler, Lewis Allen, Carroll Brooks and Wm. A. Easton.

The success of the Club is due to the harmony and good will among the members, each one being always willing to do his or her share and a little more. The continuance of the same spirit and methods will insure the permanent success and usefulness of the Hayden Station Social Club.

JOHN RODEMEYER'S MONTHLY LETTER

On the Importance of February

Dear Town Crier:

February, for a little month, has a standing in the calendar of distinctions that a much bigger month might well be proud of. Not only is it signaled by the vulgar distinction of being "the month in which women talk the least," but it ranks pre-eminent as the great American birthday month. Among the immortals that February gave to the world were (to quote from Hairache's 1917 Almanac, "Historical and Astronomical Events,") George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, H. W. Longfellow and General Harrison, Saint Valentine. Now any fair-minded and unprejudiced reader of the Town Crier will admit that this is a quintet of some consequence.

Of course February has no monopoly of great men's birthdays, and there may be other months in which a larger number of great men were born—I have no disposition to interject myself into the category, but if the question should ever be brought up, I was born in June, (June 12; I forget the year,) and they haven't got me into the Almanac's astronomical and earthquake list yet, but I'm in every telephone directory in the state. A careful and conscientious perusal of Hairache's will show that other events have happened in June, besides me. For instance, "Perigee;" I don't know who he was—maybe the discoverer of Perigoric—but for that matter it's horse and horse, for he probably never knew who I was; then there was the "battle of Bunker Hill," "Battle of Waterloo," "Cholera epidemic in New York," and "Apogee." Please note that there have been things doing in June at one time and another, even if it hasn't given birth to a bunch of ex-Presidents.

But what I started out to do was to pay loving tribute to the memory of two of February's eminent products—Washington and Lincoln. Possibly the reincarnated Town Crier can hark back to the days of Washington—maybe can even remember how he looked. If not, I enclose a portrait of the Father of his Country, to refresh his memory, which I hope you will print. It is from Ginn and Company's splendid reprint of the New England Primer, which figured so interestingly in your last issue. The portrait was evidently taken before George had recovered from the smallpox and just after he had taken a dose of boneset tea. Judging from other pictures of him that I have seen, I don't think this one really does him justice.

Nobody will seriously deny that George Washington was pre-eminently a great and good man, notwithstanding there is some dispute, among the savants and scholars of these later days, about the authenticity of the cherry tree and hatchet story, and a disposition in some quarters to believe that what George really did say to his father when asked who cut down the tree, was: "Papa, I cannot tell a lie; 'twas 'Rastus." (Rastus was the hired man.) One thing is certain: If George Washington had not been an exceptional character his reputation would not have come all the way down to us and held together so firmly that it requires several extra newspaper pages every year to tell new and truthful and up-to-date stories about him. It is only genuine merit that is thus recognized and commemorated in these days of virtuous discrimination. You don't see Messrs. P. Pilate, J. Iscariot and B. Arnold lionized with special editions and legal holidays set apart in their honor—not much. And there's a reason.

George Washington's great and glorious achievements appeal with special force to the young of all generations. How many of us can well remember standing in a row, at school, and reciting in unison, in reply to the teacher's question, "Who was George Washington?"

"Fur stin war,
Fur stin peace,
Fur stin thu hearts of his coun-tree-MUN!"

With an unmistakable accent on the "MUN." But, great as Washington was, in his day, his most ardent admirers of the present time must admit that he would be a political piker and social misfit if he were to suddenly come back now, and see how we smart twentieth centuryites do things. I had occasion a few weeks ago to pay tribute to the late Ben Franklin, who was in Washington's class, in which I said things that will apply just as aptly to Washington. The Father of his Country never in his life saw a paper envelope, nor a sulphur match, nor a steel pen, nor a kerosene lamp, nor a percussion cap, nor a locomotive, nor a photograph, nor a sewing machine, nor a telegraph instrument, nor a horse car, nor a steamboat. He never even dreamed of such things as the telephone, typewriter, phonograph, automobile, William Jennings Bryan, electric light, motor boat. Connecticut civil service commission, moving picture, steam heater, Bald-Head Club of America, submarine boat, aeroplane, appendicitis and scores of other devices and conveniences that have come to be commonplace necessities of our modern every-day life.

Now with regard to Abraham Lincoln, without exception the most fascinating character in American history: I heartily agree with everything that has ever been said in his favor; and as I understand it, his record has been very generally approved, even by the most aristocratic blue-blooded first families, of whom he was not one of which.

Abraham was not particularly distinguished during his early career, but he made good, nevertheless. With his native good sense he, too, wisely selected February as a correct month to be born in, and he, too, made his mark and had a legal holiday named after him. He was some chopper, himself. It is not on record that he ever chopped down a pet cherry tree with a toy hatchet, but it is a matter of history that he used to split rails for his bread and butter with a man-sized axe, and it is universally conceded that he cut some ice.

He had a remarkable gift for illustrating every argument with a story, and as a story teller he had no equal, and mighty few superiors. This wonderful gift enabled him to tell stories that were not originated until long after he died. It is estimated that there are 196,889 of Lincoln's own stories in circulation at the present time, and they are increasing every year as fast as literary inventiveness can originate them. A little mathematics will demonstrate that if these stories averaged ten minutes long, it would keep a man talking constantly twelve hours a day, seven days a week, for something over seven years, to tell them. And yet Lincoln not only told them all during the four years and one month that he was President, but actually found time during that period to accomplish some other things besides, that were considered of sufficient consequence to get into the newspapers.

Lincoln was a man of the people. He once said that God must have loved the common people, because He made so many of them. Undoubtedly it was in deference to this affinity between Lincoln and the common people, that Uncle Sam put Lincoln's image on the penny, where most of us would have a chance to see it occasionally, instead of perpetuating it on a bank-note of larger denomination. And everybody will admit that Uncle Sam made a big hit in doing so; for the penny was never so popular nor so precious as it has been since Lincoln's picture was stamped on it, and the people are coming to prize it more and more every day.

The Christmas Club at the Windsor Bank started this year with a very large increase over the membership of last year's club.

THE TOWN CRIER NOTES A FEW STYLES AND THINGS

Well, we never expected to be able to button our coat collars onto our caps, much as we have felt like it at this season of the year, but it is being done now in Paris and will probably be done here next July. As we like to be a little in advance of the styles and comfortable as well, we are going to have buttons put on our caps and begin right away.

From the knowledge of experience the Town Crier would like to give a word of advice to any man who may have received his first pipe at Christmas. Try it first in private and either hold a tin pan on your knees or wear an asbestos apron, as a pipe, (true friend though it may become later), before it gets acquainted with you will sometimes unexpectedly capsize and cast its glowing heart into your lap—a happening more surprising than pleasant.

Standing in snow up to your ankles while you gaze into a shop window at hats, suits, gowns, parasols, etc. labeled, "Palm Beach Styles," is almost as satisfying as looking at a moving picture of a banquet when you are good and hungry. However, if you succeed in pulling through the winter you will probably see next spring, some of these hot-house styles out from under glass right here in New England.

Any man who finds himself up against the theoretically embarrassing problem of buying underclothing for his wife, or children, can be sure of good common-sense advice and efficient assistance in his task of selection, at Miss Egan's on Pratt Street in Hartford.

Every time we see a two or three inch strip of white or flesh colored stocking between a black shoe and a black skirt we are overtaken with an overwhelming desire to raise the lady's feet up by her boot-tops or else to let out a reef in her skirt. Such anatomical irregularities are sometimes revealed as to cause the involuntary quoting of Robbie Burn's: "Oh, wad some power the giftie g'ie us to see oursel's as others see us!"

Recently, in the windows of the Sage, Allen & Company store the Town Crier's astonished eyes beheld a collection of glorified sport skirts the like of which he did not know existed. He knew in a minute that they were golf skirts as each one had a golf stick leaning against it. But Shades of the Ball-room! There is nothing too good for sport clothes now; these were made of silk and were beauties too. Even a man could see that, though it may stagger him a bit to describe them. One was all white silk, one white silk with fancy colored silk at the sides of the skirt and one that particularly arrested his attention was a yellow silk with green baby summer squashes scattered over it, and two pockets that looked like collapsed calashes and were big enough to accommodate a dozen golf balls, your lunch and any other little thing you might want for a morning's sport.

I want to say to the good people of Windsor, "It is your duty to criticise the work of the pastor of your church, the officers of your lodge and the Town officials, for it certainly helps them in their duties." The Leap Year Dance proved to be a most successful and salubrious affair. Salubrious, in our dictionary, is defined as healthful, wholesome, and we use it advisedly as it seems a most excellent thing for one sex to meet, once in a while, some of the problems that confront the other sex at all times.

The Christmas Trees tastefully arranged about the hall, gave a novel and pleasing decorative effect, much commented on.

The ladies had a chance to experience that puppy-that-expects-awhipping sort of feeling that assails a man when he meets his best friend after circumstances beyond his control have filled his program. They also had opportunity to rush around through the crowd hunting their partners all the time accompanied by the fear that they were being judged neglectful.

Meanwhile the men had the privilege of wondering why Jane Doe didn't ask for a dance and of sitting on the anxious seat wearing a careless, happy smile when their partners, being a bit late, made them think they had been forgotten. A great teacher of tolerance is the Leap Year Dance!

Ladies possessing husbands very generally took them, although told by the ticket committee that they could do as they liked in that respect. We suppose that circumstances having once forced a woman to acknowledge a preference she does not so much mind doing it again, but let any unmarried man who may be feeling puffed up because he was invited be warned and any discouraged brother who was not specially invited take heart, for some years of interesting experience have taught the Town Crier that what a woman may say or do in public is small indication of what she really thinks and means.

One avowed suffragette was observed sitting quietly in a corner, not even venturing to ask a man to sit out a dance, much to the chagrin of a friend who hovered hopefully and conveniently near. Another woman whose convictions yet leave her balanced uncertainly on top of the fence went boldly about gathering partners where she would.

From the first dance to the last the people danced; never have we seen so few "sitters-out." The floor was well filled and some of us to whom dancing was no every day affair at times went bumping around like wasps on a ceiling. Our "beg pardons," however, were received with smiles and as we never pry into comments made in the bosoms of families we are still happy.

The members of all committees are to be congratulated on the success of the dance financially as well as socially, as they netted thirty-seven dollars and some cents to turn over to the Children's Home at Newington.

We are sorry that we must wait four years before we can go to another dance of this kind but we wonder if the women are the only ones who can make money out of a dance in Windsor?
